Re: Broadband Industry Practice (WC Docket No. 07-52)

October 12, 2009

Dear Chairman Genachowski,

I am writing today on behalf of the Korean Unification Research Foundation's Orange-San Diego chapter. We are a research organization dedicated to promoting the peaceful reunification of the Korean Peninsula and promoting civic involvement and cultural understanding in Orange County and San Diego area.

I recently learned the FCC is considering expediting the adoption of net neutrality rules. On behalf of our members, we ask that you slow this process down and give thoughtful and deliberate consideration to all broadband-related policies here in the U.S.

Koreans are avid Internet users. South Korea's broadband infrastructure ranks among the top in the world, with over 70% of all South Korean homes having access to the Internet. South Koreans use the Internet to communicate with relatives, build international companies, and more recently as a medium to voice individual opinions.

Over the past decade the South Korean government has faced Internet policy decisions ranging from content restriction to net neutrality and management policies. The government has taken its time and carefully developed and adopted the policies that ensure the best Internet experience for both businesses and consumers.

We encourage the US government and the FCC to do the same. Please take time to consider these complex policies to best ensure communication, business and culture are fostered, and access and adoption are not restricted.

Sincerely,

Young T. An
President

Korean Unification Foundation; Orange-San Diego, Chapter
